

Lytton First Nation

June 21, 2016

Media Press Release

United to Stop the Compost Pipeline: Honouring the Botanie Valley

- The ban of food scraps in waste by Metro Vancouver has resulted in a “pipeline” of compost to the Botanie Valley, Lytton, B.C.
- The compost “pipeline” is not consistent with The 100-Mile Diet and adds to the carbon foot-print.
- The Botanie Valley has a rich diversity of plant life and wildlife integral to the way of life of the Nlaka’pamux Nation.
- Compost creates odour.
- Keep the compost “pipeline” within Metro Vancouver.

Is your compost operator suing Lytton community members and the Lytton First Nation?

Check out some facts about Revolution Organic and its owner Ralph McRae as reported in the Vancouver Sun.

“Lytton-area compost operation generates odours and lawsuits”

Larry Pynn, Vancouver Sun 01.05.2016

<http://www.vancouversun.com/lytton+area+compost+operation+generates+odours+lawsuits/11635020/story.html>

“Organics composter heads to court to force Lytton First Nation to allow road access” Larry Pynn, Vancouver Sun. Published on: June 17, 2016

<http://vancouversun.com/news/local-news/organics-composter-heads-to-court-to-force-lytton-first-nation-to-allow-road-access>

We are here to stay and will defend our freedom of speech. We will not be bullied.

Join us to STOP the compost “pipeline” to the Botanie Valley.